Senior Front-End Developer

Throughout my career at Priceline I have been heavily involved with modernizing their Front-End workflow which includes, but certainly not limited to, defining and re-architecting multiple ecommerce web client applications based on what we expect from a modern tech stack, embracing ES2015+, building and maintaining platform agnostic web components, advocating specific frameworks and libraries, and of course mentoring those I work with. Having touched many parts of the site, and multiple products which require unique business logic, I often move from team to team to help them reach a particular high priority goal.

Web Developer

Working at Pappas Group got knee deep in a bunch of code straight out of college. This also gave me the opportunity to work with a vast array of clients, many of which had unique requirements. Duties ranged from building and at times leading the front-end development for various CMS driven sites (Drupal, WordPress, etc), building landing pages that usually had more compelling JS driven experiences, and of course the dreaded HTML email template.
